When one has a full mempool is there a way to tell bitcoin client to make best effort to keep certain chain alive, even if it means using non available blocks in a specific direction? A: Theoretically, yes, but it won't work. Bitcoin client is a synchronization protocol as well, and it is important that different clients can converge on the same valid chain. In order for this to happen, the block ordering must be resistant to rewinding. In other words, if you're asking the question if you can force the client to use a particular block as an anchor 04aeff104c
